THE AMBITIOUS FOX
AND
THE UNAPPROACHABLE GRAPES

THE AMBITIOUS FOX
AND
THE UNAPPROACHABLE GRAPES

A farmer built around his crop
A wall, and crowned his labors
By placing glass upon the top
To lacerate his neighbors,
Provided they at any time
Should feel disposed the wall to climb.

He also drove some iron pegs
Securely in the coping,
To tear the bare, defenceless legs
Of brats who, upward groping,
Might steal, despite the risk of fall,
The grapes that grew upon the wall.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

One day a fox, on thieving bent,
A crafty and an old one,
Most shrewdly tracked the pungent scent
That eloquently told one
That grapes were ripe and grapes were good
And likewise in the neighborhood.

He threw some stones of divers shapes
The luscious fruit to jar off :
It made him ill to see the grapes
So near and yet so far off.
His throws were strong, his aim was fine,
But "Never touched me!" said the vine.

The farmer shouted, "Drat the boys!"
And, mounting on a ladder,
He sought the cause of all the noise ;
No farmer could be madder,
Which was not hard to understand
Because the glass had cut his hand.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

His passion he could not restrain,
But shouted out, "You're thievish!"
The fox replied, with fine disdain,
"Come, country, don't be peevish."
(Now "country" is an epithet
One can't forgive, nor yet forget.)

The farmer rudely answered back
With compliments unvarnished,
And downward hurled the bric-à-brac
With which the wall was garnished,
In view of which demeanor strange,
The fox retreated out of range.

"I will not try the grapes to-day,"
He said. "My appetite is
Fastidious, and, anyway,
I fear appendicitis."
(The fox was one of the élite
Who call it site instead of seet.)

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

THE MORAL is that if your host
Throws glass around his entry
You know it isn't done by most
Who claim to be the gentry,
While if he hits you in the head
You may be sure he's underbred.

THE PERSEVERING TORTOISE
AND
THE PRETENTIOUS HARE

THE PERSEVERING TORTOISE
AND
THE PRETENTIOUS HARE

Once a turtle, finding plenty
In seclusion to bewitch,
Lived a dolce far niente
Kind of life within a ditch ;
Rivers had no charm for him,
As he told his wife and daughter,
“Though my friends are in the swim,
Mud is thicker far than water.”

One fine day, as was his habit,
He was dozing in the sun,
When a young and flippant rabbit
Happened by the ditch to run :

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

"Come and race me," he exclaimed,

"Fat inhabitant of puddles.

Sluggard! You should be ashamed.

Such a life the brain befuddles."

This, of course, was banter merely,

But it stirred the torpid blood

Of the turtle, and severely

Forth he issued from the mud.

"Done!" he cried. The race began,

But the hare resumed his banter,

Seeing how his rival ran

In a most unlovely canter.

Shouting, "Terrapin, you're bested!

You'd be wiser, dear old chap,

If you sat you down and rested

When you reach the second lap."

Quoth the turtle, "I refuse.

As for you, with all your talking,

Sit on any lap you choose.

I shall simply go on walking."

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

Now this sporting proposition
Was, upon its face, absurd ;
Yet the hare, with expedition,
Took the tortoise at his word,
Ran until the final lap,
Then, supposing he'd outclassed him,
Laid him down and took a nap
And the patient turtle passed him !

Plodding on, he shortly made the
Line that marked the victor's goal ;
Paused, and found he'd won, and laid the
Flattering unction to his soul.
Then in fashion grandiose,
Like an after-dinner speaker,
Touched his flipper to his nose,
And remarked, " Ahem ! Eureka !"

And THE MORAL (lest you miss one)
Is: There's often time to spare,
And that races are (like this one)
Won not always by a hair.

THE PATRICIAN PEACOCKS
AND
THE OVERWEENING JAY

THE PATRICIAN PEACOCKS
AND
THE OVERWEENING JAY

Once a flock of stately peacocks
Promenaded on a green,
There were twenty-two or three cocks,
Each as proud as seventeen,
And a glance, however hasty,
Showed their plumage to be tasty;
Wheresoever one was placed, he
Was a credit to the scene.

Now their owner had a daughter
Who, when people came to call,
Used to say, "You'd reelly oughter
See them peacocks on the mall."

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

Now this wasn't to her credit,
And her callers came to dread it,
For the way the lady said it
Wasn't recherché at all.

But a jay that overheard it
From his perch upon a fir
Didn't take in how absurd it
Was to every one but her;
When they answered, "You don't tell us!"
And to see the birds seemed zealous
He became extremely jealous,
Wishing, too, to make a stir.

As the peacocks fed together
He would join them at their lunch,
Culling here and there a feather
Till he'd gathered quite a bunch;
Then this bird, of ways perfidious,
Stuck them on him most fastidious
Till he looked uncommon hideous,
Like a Judy or a Punch.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

But the peacocks, when they saw him,
One and all began to haul,
And to harry and to claw him
Till the creature couldn't crawl ;
While their owner's vulgar daughter,
When her startled callers sought her,
And to see the struggle brought her,
Only said, "They're on the maul."

It was really quite revolting
When the tumult died away,
One would think he had been moulting
So dishevelled was the jay ;
He was more than merely slighted,
He was more than disunited,
He'd been simply dynamited
In the fervor of the fray.

And THE MORAL of the verses
Is: That short men can't be tall.
Nothing sillier or worse is
Than a jay upon a mall,

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

And the jay opiniative
Who, because he's imitative,
Thinks he's highly decorative
Is the biggest jay of all.

THE ARROGANT FROG
AND
THE SUPERIOR BULL

THE ARROGANT FROG

AND

THE SUPERIOR BULL

Once, on a time and in a place
Conducive to malaria,
There lived a member of the race
Of Rana Temporaria;
Or, more concisely still, a frog
Inhabited a certain bog.

A bull of Brobdingnagian size,
Too proud for condescension,
One morning chanced to cast his eyes
Upon the frog I mention ;
And, being to the manner born,
Surveyed him with a lofty scorn.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

Perceiving this, the bactrian's frame
With anger was inflated,
Till, growing larger, he became
Egregiously elated ;
For inspiration's sudden spell
Had pointed out a way to swell.

“Ha! ha!” he proudly cried, “a fig
For this, your mammoth torso!
Just watch me while I grow as big
As you—or even more so!”
To which magniloquential gush
His bullship simply answered “Tush!”

Alas! the frog's success was slight,
Which really was a wonder,
In view of how with main and might
He strove to grow rotunder!
And, standing patiently the while,
The bull displayed a quiet smile.

"HE STROVE TO GROW ROTUNDER"

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

But ah, the frog tried once too oft
And, doing so, he busted;
Whereat the bull discreetly coughed
And moved away, disgusted,
As well he might, considering
The wretched taste that marked the thing.

THE MORAL: Everybody knows
How ill a wind it is that blows.

THE DOMINEERING EAGLE
AND
THE INVENTIVE BRATLING

THE DOMINEERING EAGLE
AND
THE INVENTIVE BRATLING

O'er a small suburban borough
Once an eagle used to fly,
Making observations thorough
From his station in the sky,
And presenting the appearance
Of an animated V,
Like the gulls that lend coherence
Unto paintings of the sea.

Looking downward at a church in
This attractive little shire,
He beheld a smallish urchin
Shooting arrows at the spire;

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

In a spirit of derision,

“Look alive!” the eagle said;

And, with infinite precision,

Dropped a feather on his head.

Then the boy, annoyed distinctly

By the freedom of the bird,

Voiced his anger quite succinctly

In a single scathing word;

And he sat him on a barrow,

And he fashioned of this same

Eagle’s feather such an arrow

As was worthy of the name.

Then he tried his bow, and, stringing

It with caution and with care,

Sent that arrow singing, winging

Towards the eagle in the air.

Straight it went, without an error,

And the target, bathed in blood,

Lurched, and lunged, and fell to terra

Firma, landing with a thud.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

“Bird of freedom,” quoth the urchin,
With an unrelenting frown,
“You shall decorate a perch in
The menagerie in town;
But of feathers quite a cluster
I shall first remove for Ma;
Thanks to you, she’ll have a duster
For her precious objets d’art.”

And THE MORAL is that pride is
The precursor of a fall.
Those beneath you to deride is
Not expedient at all.
Howsoever meek and humble
Your inferiors may be,
They perchance may make you tumble,
So respect them. Q. E. D.

THE ICONOCLASTIC RUSTIC
AND
THE APROPOS ACORN

THE ICONOCLASTIC RUSTIC
AND
THE APROPOS ACORN

Reposing 'neath some spreading trees,
A populistic bumpkin

Amused himself by offering these

Reflections on a pumpkin:

"I would not, if the choice were mine,
Grow things like that upon a vine,
For how imposing it would be
If pumpkins grew upon a tree."

Like other populists, you'll note,

Of views enthusiastic,

He'd learned by heart, and said by rote

A creed iconoclastic;

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

And in his dim, uncertain sight
Whatever wasn't must be right,
From which it follows he had strong
Convictions that what was, was wrong.

As thus he sat beneath an oak
 An acorn fell abruptly
And smote his nose : whereat he spoke
 Of acorns most corruptly.

“Great Scott!” he cried. “The Dickens!” too,
And other authors whom he knew,
And having duly mentioned those,
He expeditiously arose.

Then, though with pain he nearly swooned,
 He bathed his organ nasal
With arnica, and soothed the wound
 With extract of witch hazel;
And surely we may well excuse
The victim if he changed his views:
“If pumpkins fell from trees like that,”
He murmured, “Where would I be at?”

Peter Newell '98

"AN ACORN FELL ABRUPTLY"

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

Of course it's wholly clear to you
That when these words he uttered
He proved conclusively he knew
Which side his bread was buttered;
And, if this point you have not missed,
You'll learn to love this populist,
The only one of all his kind
With sense enough to change his mind.

THE MORAL: In the early spring
A pumpkin-tree would be a thing
Most gratifying to us all,
But how about the early fall?

THE UNUSUAL GOOSE
AND
THE IMBECILIC WOODCUTTER

THE UNUSUAL GOOSE
AND
THE IMBECILIC WOODCUTTER

A woodcutter bought him a gander,
Or at least that was what he supposed,
As a matter of fact, 'twas a slander
As a later occurrence disclosed ;
For they locked the bird up in the garret
To fatten, the while it grew old,
And it laid there a twenty-two carat
Fine egg of the purest of gold !

There was much unaffected rejoicing
In the home of the woodcutter then,
And his wife, her exuberance voicing,
Proclaimed him most lucky of men.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

“’Tis an omen of fortune, this gold egg,”

She said, “and of practical use,
For this fowl doesn’t lay any old egg,
She’s a highly superior goose.”

’Twas this creature’s habitual custom,
This laying of superfine eggs,
And they made it their practice to dust ’em
And pack them by dozens in kegs:
But the woodcutter’s mind being vapid
And his foolishness more than profuse,
In order to get them more rapid
He slaughtered the innocent goose.

He made her a gruel of acid
Which she very obligingly ate,
And at once with a touchingly placid
Demeanor succumbed to her fate.
With affection that passed the platonic
They buried her under the moss,
And her epitaph wasn’t ironic
In stating, “We mourn for our loss.”

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

And THE MORAL: It isn't much use,
As the woodcutter found to be true,
To lay for an innocent goose
Just because she is laying for you.

THE RUDE RAT
AND
THE UNOSTENTATIOUS OYSTER

THE RUDE RAT
AND
THE UNOSTENTATIOUS OYSTER

Upon the shore, a mile or more
From traffic and confusion,
An oyster dwelt, because he felt
A longing for seclusion;
Said he: "I love the stillness of
This spot. It's like a cloister."
(These words I quote because, you note,
They rhyme so well with oyster.)

A prying rat, believing that
She needed change of diet,
In search of such disturbed this much-
To-be-desired quiet.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

To say the least, this tactless beast
Was apt to rudely roister :
She tapped his shell, and called him—well,
A name that hurt the oyster.

“I see,” she cried, “you’re open wide,
And, searching for a reason,
September’s here, and so it’s clear
That oysters are in season.”
She smiled a smile that showed this style
Of badinage rejoiced her,
Advanced a pace with easy grace,
And sniffed the silent oyster.

The latter’s pride was sorely tried,
He thought of what he could say,
Reflected what the common lot
Of vulgar molluscs would say;
Then caught his breath, grew pale as death,
And, as his brow turned moister,
Began to close, and nipped her nose!
Superb, dramatic oyster!

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

We note with joy that οἱ πολλοί,

Whom maidens bite the thumb at,

Are apt to try some weak reply

To things they should be dumb at.

THE MORAL, then, for crafty men

Is: When a maid has voiced her

Contemptuous heart, don't think you're smart,

But shut up—like the oyster.

THE URBAN RAT
AND
THE SUBURBAN RAT

THE URBAN RAT
AND
THE SUBURBAN RAT

A metropolitan rat invited
His country cousin in town to dine;
The country cousin replied, "Delighted."
And signed himself, "Sincerely thine."
The town rat treated the country cousin
To half a dozen
Kinds of wine.

He served him terrapin, kidneys devilled,
And roasted partridge, and candied fruit;
In Little Neck Clams at first they revelled,
And then in Pommery, sec and brut;

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

The country cousin exclaimed : " Such feeding
Proclaims your breeding
Beyond dispute ! "

But just as, another bottle broaching,
They came to chicken en casserole
A ravenous cat was heard approaching,
And, passing his guest a finger-bowl,
The town rat murmured, " The feast is ended. "
And then descended
The nearest hole.

His cousin followed him, helter-skelter,
And, pausing beneath the pantry floor,
He glanced around at their dusty shelter
And muttered, " This is a beastly bore.
My place as an epicure resigning,
I'll try this dining
In town no more.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

“You must dine some night at my rustic cottage;

I'll warn you now that it's simple fare :

A radish or two, a bowl of pottage,

And the wine that's known as ordinaire,

But for holes I haven't to make a bee-line,

No prowling feline

Molests me there.

“You smile at the lot of a mere commuter,

You think that my life is hard, mayhap,

But I'm sure than you I am far acuter:

I ain't afraid of no cat nor trap.”

The city rat could but meekly stammer,

“Don't use such grammar,

My worthy chap.”

He dined next night with his poor relation,

And caught dyspepsia, and lost his train,

He waited an hour in the lonely station,

And said some things that were quite profane.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

"I'll never," he cried, in tones complaining,

"Try entertaining

That rat again."

It's easy to make a memorandum

About THE MORAL these verses teach :

De gustibus non est disputandum ;

The meaning of which Etruscan speech
Is wheresoever you're hunger quelling

Pray keep your dwelling

In easy reach.

THE IMPECUNIOUS CRICKET
AND
THE FRUGAL ANT

THE IMPECUNIOUS CRICKET
AND
THE FRUGAL ANT

There was an ant, a spinster ant,
Whose virtues were so many
That she became intolerant
Of those who hadn't any:
She had a small and frugal mind
And lived a life ascetic,
Nor was her temperament the kind
That's known as sympathetic.

I skip details. Suffice to say
That, knocking at her wicket,
There chanced to come one autumn day
A common garden cricket

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

So ragged, poor, and needy that,
Without elucidation,
One saw the symptoms of a bat
Of several months' duration.

He paused beside her door-step, and,
With one pathetic gesture,
He called attention with his hand
To both his shoes and vesture.
"I joined," said he, "an opera troupe.
They suddenly disbanded,
And left me on the hostel stoop,
Lugubriously stranded.

"I therefore lay aside my pride
And frankly ask for clothing."
"Begone!" the frugal ant replied.
"I look on you with loathing.
Your muddy shoes have spoiled the lawn,
Your hands have soiled the fence, too.
If you need money, go and pawn
Your watch—if you have sense to."

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

THE MORAL is: Albeit lots
Of people follow Dr. Watts,
The sluggard, when his means are scant,
Should seek an uncle, not an ant!

THE PAMPERED LAPDOG
AND
THE MISGUIDED ASS

THE PAMPERED LAPDOG
AND
THE MISGUIDED ASS

A woolly little terrier pup
Gave vent to yelps distressing,
Whereat his mistress took him up
And soothed him with caressing,
And yet he was not in the least
What one would call a handsome beast.

He might have been a Javanese,
He might have been a Jap dog,
And also neither one of these,
But just a common lapdog,
The kind that people send, you know,
Done up in cotton, to the Show.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

At all events, whate'er his race,
The pretty girl who owned him
Caressed his unattractive face
And petted and cologned him,
While, watching her with mournful eye,
A patient ass stood silent by.

"If thus," he mused, "the feminine
And fascinating gender
Is led to love, I, too, can win
Her protestations tender."
And then the poor, misguided chap
Sat down upon the lady's lap.

Then, as her head with terror swam,
"This method seems to suit you,"
Observed the ass, "so here I am."
Said she, "Get up, you brute you!"
And promptly screamed aloud for aid:
No ass was ever more dismayed.

“SAID SHE, ‘GET UP, YOU BRUTE YOU!’”

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

They took the ass into the yard
And there, with whip and truncheon,
They beat him, and they beat him hard,
From breakfast-time till luncheon.
He only gave a tearful gulp,
Though almost pounded to a pulp.

THE MORAL is (or seems, at least,
To be): In etiquette you
Will find that while enough's a feast
A surplus will upset you.
Toujours, toujours la politesse, if
The quantity be not excessive.

THE VAINGLORIOUS OAK
AND
THE MODEST BULRUSH

THE VAINGLORIOUS OAK
AND
THE MODEST BULRUSH

A bulrush stood on a river's rim,
And an oak that grew near by
Looked down with cold hauteur on him,
And addressed him this way: "Hi!"
The rush was a proud patrician, and
He retorted, "Don't you know,
What the veriest boor should understand,
That 'Hi' is low?"

This cutting rebuke the oak ignored.
He returned, "My slender friend,
I will frankly state that I'm somewhat bored
With the way you bow and bend."

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

"But you quite forget," the rush replied,

"It's an art these bows to do,
An art I wouldn't attempt if I'd
Such boughs as you."

"Of course," said the oak, "in my sapling days
My habit it was to bow,
But the wildest storm that the winds could raise
Would never disturb me now.
I challenge the breeze to make me bend,
And the blast to make me sway."
The shrewd little bulrush answered, "Friend,
Don't get so gay."

And the words had barely left his mouth
When he saw the oak turn pale,
For, racing along south-east-by-south,
Came ripping a raging gale.
And the rush bent low as the storm went past,
But stiffly stood the oak,
Though not for long, for he found the blast
No idle joke.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

* * * * *

Imagine the lightning's gleaming bars,
Imagine the thunder's roar,
For that is exactly what eight stars
Are set in a row here for!
The oak lay prone when the storm was done,
While the rush, still quite erect,
Remarked aside, "What under the sun
Could one expect?"

And THE MORAL, I'd have you understand,
Would have made La Fontaine blush,
For it's this: Some storms come early, and
Avoid the rush!

THE INHUMAN WOLF
AND
THE LAMB SANS GENE

THE INHUMAN WOLF
AND
THE LAMB SANS GENE

A gaunt and relentless wolf, possessed
Of a quite insatiable thirst,
Once paused at a stream to drink and rest,
And found that, bound on a similar quest,
A lamb had arrived there first.

The lamb was a lamb of a garrulous mind
And frivolity most extreme :
In the fashion common to all his kind,
He cantered in front and galloped behind,
And troubled the limpid stream.

“My friend,” said the wolf, with a winsome air,
“Your capers I can’t admire.”

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

"Go to!" quoth the lamb. (Though he said not where,
He showed what he meant by his brazen stare
And the way that he gambolled higher.)

"My capers," he cried, "are the kind that are
Invariably served with lamb.
Remember, this is a public bar,
And I'll do as I please. If your drink I mar,
I don't give a tinker's ."

He paused and glanced at the rivulet,
And that pause than speech was worse,
For his roving eye a saw-mill met,
And, near it, the word which should be set
At the end of the previous verse.

Said the wolf: "You are tough and may bring remorse,
But of such is the world well rid.
I've swallowed your capers, I've swallowed your sauce,
And it's plain to be seen that my only course
Is swallowing you." He did.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

THE MORAL : The wisest lambs they are
Who, when they're assailed by thirst,
Keep well away from a public bar ;
For of all black sheep, or near, or far,
The public bar-lamb's worst !

THE SYCOPHANTIC FOX
AND
THE GULLIBLE RAVEN

THE SYCOPHANTIC FOX
AND
THE GULLIBLE RAVEN

A raven sat upon a tree,
And not a word he spoke, for
His beak contained a piece of Brie,
Or, maybe, it was Roquefort :
We'll make it any kind you please—
At all events, it was a cheese.

Beneath the tree's umbrageous limb
A hungry fox sat smiling ;
He saw the raven watching him,
And spoke in words beguiling.
“J'admire,” said he, “ton beau plumage.”
(The which was simply persiflage.)

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

Two things there are, no doubt you know,
To which a fox is used :
A rooster that is bound to crow,
A crow that's bound to roost,
And whichsoever he espies
He tells the most unblushing lies.

“Sweet fowl,” he said, “I understand
You're more than merely natty,
I hear you sing to beat the band
And Adelina Patti.
Pray render with your liquid tongue
A bit from ‘Götterdämmerung.’”

This subtle speech was aimed to please
The crow, and it succeeded :
He thought no bird in all the trees
Could sing as well as he did.
In flattery completely doused,
He gave the “Jewel Song” from “Faust.”

“‘J’ADMIRE,’ SAID HE, ‘TON BEAU PLUMAGE’”

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

But gravitation's law, of course,
As Isaac Newton showed it,
Exerted on the cheese its force,
And elsewhere soon bestowed it.
In fact, there is no need to tell
What happened when to earth it fell.

I blush to add that when the bird
Took in the situation
He said one brief, emphatic word,
Unfit for publication.
The fox was greatly startled, but
He only sighed and answered "Tut."

THE MORAL is: A fox is bound
To be a shameless sinner.
And also: When the cheese comes round
You know it's after dinner.
But (what is only known to few)
The fox is after dinner, too.

THE MICROSCOPIC TROUT
AND
THE MACHIAVELIAN FISHERMAN

THE MICROSCOPIC TROUT
AND
THE MACHIAVELIAN FISHERMAN

A fisher was casting his flies in a brook,
According to laws of such sciences,
With a patented reel and a patented hook
And a number of other appliances ;
And the thirty-fifth cast, which he vowed was the last
(It was figured as close as a decimal),
Brought suddenly out of the water a trout
Of measurements infinitesimal.

This fish had a way that would win him a place
In the best and most polished society,
And he looked at the fisherman full in the face
With a visible air of anxiety :

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

He murmured "Alas!" from his place on the grass,
And then, when he'd twisted and wriggled, he
Remarked in a pet that his heart was upset
And digestion all higgledy-piggledy.

"I request," he observed, "to be instantly flung
Once again in the pool I've been living in."
The fisherman said, "You will tire out your tongue.
Do you see any signs of my giving in?
Put you back in the pool? Why, you fatuous fool,
I have eaten much smaller and thinner fish.
You're not salmon or sole, but I think, on the whole,
You're a fairly respectable dinner-fish."

The fisherman's cook tried her hand on the trout
And with various herbs she embellished him;
He was lovely to see, and there isn't a doubt
That the fisherman's family relished him,
And, to prove that they did, both his wife and his kid
Devoured the trout with much eagerness,
Avowing no dish could compare with that fish,
Notwithstanding his singular meagreness.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

And THE MORAL, you'll find, is although it is kind
To grant favors that people are wishing for,
Still a dinner you'll lack if you chance to throw back
In the pool little trout that you're fishing for ;
If their pleading you spurn you will certainly learn
That herbs will deliciously vary 'em :
It is needless to state that a trout on a plate
Beats several in the aquarium.

THE CONFIDING PEASANT
AND
THE MALADROIT BEAR

THE CONFIDING PEASANT
AND
THE MALADROIT BEAR

A peasant had a docile bear,
A bear of manners pleasant,
And all the love she had to spare
She lavished on the peasant :
She proved her deep affection plainly :
(The method was a bit ungainly).

The peasant had to dig and delve,
And, as his class are apt to,
When all the whistles blew at twelve
He ate his lunch, and napped, too,
The bear a careful outlook keeping
The while her master lay a-sleeping.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

As thus the peasant slept one day,
The weather being torrid,
A gnat beheld him where he lay
And lit upon his forehead,
And thence, like all such wingèd creatures,
Proceeded over all his features.

The watchful bear, perceiving that
The gnat lit on her master,
Resolved to light upon the gnat
And plunge him in disaster ;
She saw no sense in being lenient
When stones lay round her, most convenient.

And so a weighty rock she aimed
With much enthusiasm :
“Oh, lor’ !” the startled gnat exclaimed,
And promptly had a spasm :
A natural proceeding this was,
Considering how close the miss was.

Peter Newell '94

“AND SO A WEIGHTY ROCK SHE AIMED”

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

Now by his dumb companion's pluck,
Which caused the gnat to squall so,
The sleeping man was greatly struck
(And by the boulder, also).

In fact, his friends who idolized him
Remarked they hardly recognized him.

Of course the bear was greatly grieved,
But, being just a dumb thing,
She only thought: "I was deceived,
But still, I did hit something!"
Which showed this masculine achievement
Had somewhat soothed her deep bereavement.

THE MORAL: If you prize your bones
Beware of females throwing stones.

THE PRECIPITATE COCK
AND
THE UNAPPRECIATED PEARL

THE PRECIPITATE COCK
AND
THE UNAPPRECIATED PEARL

A rooster once pursued a worm
That lingered not to brave him,
To see his wretched victim squirm
A pleasant thrill it gave him ;
He summoned all his kith and kin,
They hastened up by legions,
With quaint, expressive gurgles in
Their œsophageal regions.

Just then a kind of glimmering
Attracting his attention,
The worm became too small a thing
For more than passing mention :

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

The throng of hungry hens and rude
He skilfully evaded.

Said he, "I' faith, if this be food,
I saw the prize ere they did."

It was a large and costly pearl,
Belonging in a necklace,
And dropped by some neglectful girl:
Some people are so reckless!
The cock assumed an air forlorn,
And cried, "It's really cruel.
I thought it was a grain of corn:
It's nothing but a jewel."

He turned again to where his clan
In one astounding tangle
With eager haste together ran
To slay the helpless angle,
And sighed, "He was of massive size.
I should have used discretion.
Too late! Around the toothsome prize
A bargain-sale's in session."

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

The worm's remarks upon his plight
Have never been recorded,
But any one may know how slight
Diversion it afforded ;
For worms and human beings are
Unanimous that, when pecked,
To be the prey of men they far
Prefer to being hen-pecked.

THE MORAL : When your dinner comes
Don't leave it for your neighbors,
Because you hear the sound of drums
And see the gleam of sabres ;
Or, like the cock, you'll find too late
That ornaments external
Do not for certain indicate
A bona fide kernel.

THE ABBREVIATED FOX
AND

THE ABBREVIATED FOX
AND
HIS SCEPTICAL COMRADES

A certain fox had a Grecian nose
And a beautiful tail. His friends
Were wont to say in a jesting way
A divinity shaped his ends.
The fact is sad, but his foxship had
A fault we should all eschew :
He was so deceived that he quite believed
What he heard from friends was true.

One day he found in a sheltered spot
A trap with stalwart springs
That was cunningly planned to supply the demand
For some of those tippet things.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

The fox drew nigh, and resolved to try

The way that the trap was set :

(When the trap was through with this interview

There was one less tippet to get!)

The fox returned to his doting friends

And said, with an awkward smile,

“My tail I know was comme il faut,

And served me well for a while.”

When his comrades laughed at his shortage aft

He added, with scornful bow,

“Pray check your mirth, for I hear from Worth

They’re wearing them shorter now.”

But one of his friends, a bookish chap,

Replied, with a thoughtful frown,

“You know to-day the publishers say

That the short tale won’t go down ;

And, upon my soul, I think on the whole,

That the publishers’ words are true.

I should hate, good sir, to part my fur

In the middle, as done by you.”

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

And another added these truthful words

In the midst of the eager hush,

“We can part our hair ’most anywhere

So long as we keep the brush.”

THE MORAL is this: It is never amiss

To treasure the things you’ve penned:

Preserve your tales, for, when all else fails,

They’ll be useful things—in the end.

THE HOSPITABLE CALEDONIAN
AND
THE THANKLESS VIPER

THE HOSPITABLE CALEDONIAN
AND
THE THANKLESS VIPER

A Caledonian piper
Who was walking on the wold
Nearly stepped upon a viper
Rendered torpid by the cold ;
By the sight of her admonished,
He forbore to plant his boot,
But he showed he was astonished
By the way he muttered "Hoot!"

Now this simple-minded piper
Such a kindly nature had
That he lifted up the viper
And bestowed her in his plaid.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

“Though the Scot is stern, at least he
No unhappy creature spurns,
‘Sleekit, cowrin, tim’rous beastie,’”
Quoth the piper (quoting Burns).

This was unaffected kindness,
But there was, to state the fact,
Just a slight souçon of blindness
In his charitable act.
If you’d watched the piper, shortly
You’d have seen him leap aloft,
As this snake, of ways uncourtly,
Bit him suddenly and oft.

There was really no excuse for
This, the viper’s cruel work,
And the piper found a use for
Words he’d never learned at kirk ;
But the biting was so thorough
That although the doctors tried,
Not the best in Edinburgh
Could assist him, and he died.

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

And THE MORAL is: The piper
Of the matter made a botch;
One can hardly blame the viper
If she took a nip of Scotch,
For she only did what he did,
And his nipple wasn't small,
Otherwise, you see, he needed
Not have seen the snake at all.

THE IMPETUOUS BREEZE
AND
THE DIPLOMATIC SUN

THE IMPETUOUS BREEZE
AND
THE DIPLOMATIC SUN

A Boston man an ulster had,
An ulster with a cape that fluttered :
It smacked his face, and made him mad,
And polyglot remarks he uttered :
“I bought it at a bargain,” said he,
“I’m tired of the thing already.”

The wind that chanced to blow that day
Was easterly, and rather strong, too :
It loved to see the galling way
That clothes vex those whom they belong to :
“Now watch me,” cried this spell of weather,
“I’ll rid him of it altogether.”

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

It whirled the man across the street,
It banged him up against a railing,
It twined the ulster round his feet,
But all of this was unavailing:
For not without resource it found him:
He drew the ulster closer round him.

“My word!” the man was heard to say,
“Although I like not such abuse, it’s
Not strange the wind is strong to-day,
It always is in Massachusetts.
Such weather threatens much the health of Inhabitants this Commonwealth of.”

The sun, emerging from a rift
Between the clouds, observed the victim,
And how the wind beset and biffed,
Belabored, buffeted, and kicked him.
Said he, “This wind is doubtless new here:
’Tis quite the freshest ever blew here.”

And then he put forth all his strength,
His warmth with might and main exerted,
Till upward in its tube at length
The mercury most nimbly spurted.
Phenomenal the curious sight was,
So swift the rise in Fahrenheit was.

The man supposed himself at first
The prey of some new mode of smelting:
His pulses were about to burst,
His every limb seemed slowly melting,
And, as the heat began to numb him,
He cast the ulster wildly from him.

"Impulsive breeze, the use of force,"
Observed the sun, "a foolish act is,
Perceiving which, you see, of course,
How highly efficacious tact is."
The wondering wind replied, "Good gracious!
You're right about the efficacious."

FABLES FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

THE MORAL deals, as morals do,
With tact, and all its virtues boasted,
But still I can't forget, can you,
That wretched man, first chilled, then roasted ?
Bronchitis seized him shortly after,
And that's no cause for vulgar laughter.
